

IT'S CHANGE.....

Summary:

In this poem, the speaker is a little school girl who speaks out her worries to her mother. The little girl is sad and comes to her mother and says she doesn't want to go to school as she fears of the world to decay. She says she doubts her teachers for creating a plot for the world to decay. And it is she, who sees everything getting decayed.

The speaker is worried about the fact that scientists are cloning animals and that can bring a drastic change to the world around her. She is worried about the great leap.

She is worried about biologists and geologists too. She is worried about the making of stem cells grow and geologists finding crackers in our earth.

According to her, the geologists are doubting the birth of the earth. She is not even happy with the archaeologists for digging up fossils and bones.

The reason for her worries probably is she needs to study all these changes in her syllabus. She is not happy with all these and doubts her teacher as she would be asked by her to study each and everything which can kill up her play time. She would have too much to learn.

We can see, through the speaker's point of view, that it is actually the kids who are overburdened with syllabus and rarely gets time to play and for recreation.
